'Tremendous Nail Sets'

We saw a variety of Nail Sets on a recent trip to Taiwan and found attracted to these, in particular. The Set of Four is made of nicely f Chrome Vanadium steel and have color coded sleeves which help p hands from a missed strike, and identify the sizes (1/32, 1/16, 3/3 1/8").

The separate large Flooring Punch is very interesting. You rarely se large Nail Set these days - the business end is 3/16" in diameter. A though drywall screws seem to have become ubiquitous, we often (across situations where large old nails need to be re-set or where, reason or another, large nails are called for in new construction wo

You can never have enough nail sets - not because you use so mar because they wear out or, more typically, get lost. These are very i in price - even more so if you buy a complete set of five (4 Color C plus the Flooring Set) at a special price.

Tool Review: Color-Coded Pneumatic Nails

Trackers make it easy to verify nail size

by Ryan Hawks

Each of Trackers' six nail-head colors corresponds to a different length and diameter pneumatic nail, making it easy to verify whether nails were installed according to a nailing schedule.
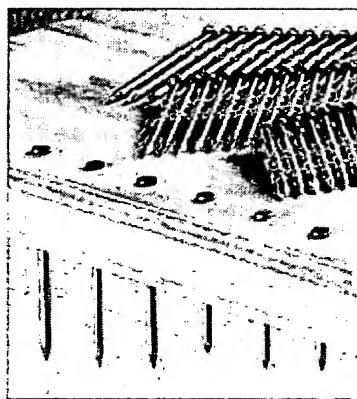

Trackers have full-round heads and come collated in paper or plastic strips or in wire-bound coils. The nails are available in a bright finish only. The impact-resistant color covers the head and the upper 1/2 in. of the nail shank. Halsteel (888) 606-6245, www.halsteel.com) is currently the only licensed manufacturer of Trackers, which are ICBO approved.

Tracker pneumatic nails, manufactured by Halsteel, cost: an additional 25¢ to $1 per box.

A colored Trackers label with nail length and diameter identifies each box of nails; for instance, 16d 3-1/2-in. by 0.162-in. dia. nails have an orange label. Each box of Tracker nails comes with two laminated color-coded charts.

With Trackers, building inspectors will find that their jobs are a little bit easier because nail lengths will be easy to identify. Builders will find it easier to tell helpers which fastener to use in a given situation ("I said to use the blues there, not reds"). Architects and engineers can have confidence that building integrity won't be compromised by the wrong fasteners. And most important, homeowners can rest assured that the nails holding their house together are capable of the job.

Tracker nails are available through distributors nationwide, but in the East, you still need to ask for them. If you contact Halsteel, they can put you in touch with a local distributor. In the West, Trackers can be found at major building-supply houses, such as Orco and Whitecap.

Ryan Hawks is a part-time carpenter and full-time surfer in Pacific Beach, CA.

Innovative Gardner Bender Colorcode™ Plastic and Insulated Metal Staples Simplify Fastener Selection

MILWAUKEE (JUNE 2003) - Choosing the right fastener for the job just got a lot easier, thanks to Gardner Bender's new ColorCode™ series of plastic and insulated metal staples. Both types of staples are color-coded to match increasingly popular color-coded NM cable: white for 14 gauge, yellow for 12 gauge, and orange for 10 gauge.

Along with making it easier for electricians to choose the right fastener, Gardner Bender ColorCode™ staples simplify inventory management and help electrical inspectors review their work efficiently. The resulting installation also presents a clean and professional appearance.

Plastic staples are available in a small, 1/2" size for two-conductor cable and a large, 3/4" size for three-conductor cable. Insulated metal staples are also available in small and large. The small size is 1/2" wide, with 1" legs, and the large, 9/16" wide, with 1 1/4" legs. All Gardner Bender plastic staples and a selection of metal staples are UL- and CSA-listed and built for long service.

ColorCode™ plastic staples feature high-density, polyethylene straps for strength and include an ultraviolet additive that prevents deterioration or burning. Nails are zinc-plated to resist rust and corrosion and both may be pounded simultaneously, making starting and driving easy. Smooth saddles provide superior holding power while protecting cable insulation from damage during installation. Minimum nail exposure and maximum pull-out resistance are assured by special recesses in the plastic designed to hold the nail heads.

ColorCode™ insulated metal staples—an industry first—feature heavy-duty, 12-gauge carbon steel construction delivering maximum strength and holding power. High-impact, PVC coating is applied evenly using a dipping process and offers superior dielectric performance at 750+ volts per mil. Sharp, offset points make staple legs easy to start and drive straight, while the PVC coating helps protect against insulation damage due to overdriving and mis-hits.

Both types of innovative Gardner Bender ColorCode™ series staples are made in the U.S.A. and will be appreciated by electrical industry personnel who have for years used various, home-grown methods to differentiate fasteners in the field. With the one-of-a-kind ColorCode™ staples series, all that's necessary is matching the fastener color to the NM cable gauge. Simple, fast, and virtually foolproof.

For over 40 years, Gardner Bender has been designing, manufacturing and marketing professional electrical tools and accessories. For more information on Gardner Bender's complete line of products.
